DETAILED ACTIONPreliminary Matters

The following Allowance supplements the previously mailed Allowance of 08/20/07. The issuance of this supplemental Allowance is solely to confirm that the Examiner took the opportunity to examine and analyze additional IDS references submitted by the Applicant on 10/22/07.

After careful consideration, the Examiner finds no evidence contained within the additional IDS references that the prior issued Allowance of 08/20/07 should not stand. The prior issued Allowance is thereby reaffirmed.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 20 – 35 are allowed.

The following is a statement of reasons for indication of allowable subject matter.

The prior art fails to teach or suggest the limitations of:

An information portal system that authenticates a user for access at the information portal system and then said portal authenticates itself to an institution server to retrieve information on the user's behalf, wherein "the portal-institution authentication data [is] different from the user-institution authentication data." (as in independent Claims 20, 26 and 31).

Such limitation is present in all independent claims.

It is well known in the art of information systems for a user to authenticate himself with an information portal and for said information portal to retrieve information from a financial institution server on the user's behalf. Traditionally, the user provides the information portal with the userid and password that the user would utilize to directly retrieve information from the financial institution, and the information portal using such authentication data interacts with the financial institution in the user's stead. Such a conventional system is termed a "stand-in" system, as the information portal stands in the place of the user to obtain data from the financial institution.

The instant application distinguishes itself from this common practice as the userid and password that is utilized for direct user-institution authentication is different and separate from the userid and password utilized by the information portal for portal-institution authentication.

With the usage of a dual authentication protocol, security is enhanced. Under the conventional system should unauthorized personnel infiltrate the information portal they could conceivably obtain a user's userid and password from the portal system, allowing them authorized access to user information at a financial institution. However, the instant application does not require storage of such information at the information portal, rather the information portal possesses a separate and distinct userid and password for access to user information at a financial institution. Usage of a separate and distinct userid and password for authentication of the information portal allows the financial institution server to establish separate security protocols for the information portal, such as limiting the actions that the information portal can take on the user's behalf.

Freishtat (US Patent 6,317,783) discloses an information portal system (intermediary website) in which a user (end user) provides the portal system with authentication data (registration information) for use with a financial institution (PI provider). The portal utilizes the user's authentication data to connect to the financial institution to retrieve information on the user's behalf. However, Freishtat does not teach nor suggest the applicant's dual authentication protocol wherein "the portal-institution authentication data [is] different from the user-institution authentication data."

Neither this patent prior art reference, alone nor in combination with other patents, publications nor non-patent literature, disclosed nor teaches the feature(s) of a dual authentication protocol wherein "the portal-institution authentication data [is] different from the user-institution authentication data."
